45	Add "IUSY should tackle the role of global cities in terms of political and economical aspects. This is a topical issue, which works between two main progressive ideas for an equal world such as the global democratic governance and the climate change. If our goal is still focused on the safeguard of democratic institutions we should tackle this issue through important limitations on the territorialized power of corporations both in developing and rich countries.

ALL OVER THE WORLD TO CHANGE IT!

INTERNATIONAL UNION OF SOCIALIST YOUTH

A resolution that works in that sense might stress the rules of no tax areas in order to limit the expansion of tax heavens in small countries. Limiting the independence of corporations in those countries means implementing the influence of democratic authorities in global cities and, in the same time, reinforcing legitimation and contractual power to developing countries.

In a global scenario like this, only a strong democratic system would be able to really rule the city and its development that means allowing citizens the entire territorial control.

Generally both in global cities and poor countries there is a huge gap between the political power of local administrations and the decisions made by corporations and their influence in the governance of the city. Through the limitation of tax heavens and the economic interdependence of global investments, public institutions will be able to achieve more power, ensuring equal rights to each citizen.”
